SINATRA's indebtedness to "the boys" may be traced to a low spot in his career, when racket figures helped him out and started him on the road to his present position of eminence in the entertainment field.

The informant pointed out that on Friday, 5/3/63, a story was published in the "Miami Herald" to the effect that MARGULIS had taken the fifth amendment when questioned as to the disposition of some $130,000.00 which the hotel claimed in its tax return had been rebated to guests.

The informant believes that the appearance of FISCHETTI [redacted] at this time and under these circumstances was an indication that [redacted] Fontainebleau and that FISCHETTI is a liaison man for them.

It is the belief of the informant that the $130,000.00, which the hotel claimed was rebated to guests, actually went to "the boys."
